FOREWORD

We Seniors who are graduating in 1942, have striven to follow the precedent set by other Senior classes--the compiling of the "Perannos," a record of the years of our high school days.

In the future may we be repaid for our efforts by pleasant memories as we thumb through its pages. Thoughts of the sports, music, and all of the underclassmen shall not cease to exist, but will remain in our hearts for many years to come.

Dear Friends:

The goal towards which you have been striving for so long has been reached. You are about to graduate. Undoubtedly you feel a tinge of regret as you realize that you will soon be leaving your high school days forever. Do not permit this feeling to decrease your joy in a worthy task well done and in a definite end achieved, but set a new and still more worthy ideal for your efforts and continue ever forward.

Each individual is different from all others and each must choose the path through life that seems best for him. The heredity and the environment of each one of us has been different and each one's path will vary according to these influencing factors. Each one of you should sincerely and prayerfully try to take upon yourself that part of the world's work which you feel that you can do best, and for which you are ideally suited. Only in so doing can you attain for yourself the greatest happiness in living.

The Board of Education and your teachers join with me in wishing you every success and joy as you go forth into this war-torn world and it is our fervent wish that you may play an important part in promptly returning humanity to the pursuits of peace based upon a universal brotherhood of man.

Most sincerely yours,

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Estil Grimm our classmate who met an untimely death in June, 1941. His absence has been deeply regretted by all of his many friends.

In memory of Floyd Yinger who was instructor in English and history in Flushing High School from 1938 to 1941. At the close of the last school year he resigned to accept the position as Principal of Utica High School. Illness prevented his assuming his new duties. He passed away in January, 1942. While in Flushing High School, Mr. Yinger endeared himself to the faculty and students because of his unfailing sense of humor, his ability to be a pal to every boy and girl, and his good sportsmanship at all time and under all circumstances. Seldom does one find these qualities in such abundance in one man. All of his Flushing friends mourn his passing.

CLASS HISTORY

One fine day in September, a group of 120 bright intelligent children franchised abroad in the halls of Old Franklin High School. They were what is known to the intellectual world as Freshmen.

Later that week they met in the study hall and elected a few individuals to head their class. They were: President, Dick McNally; Vice president, Maxine Dyball; Secretary and Treasurer, Bill Wistner. They also chose Gerald Luce and Jean Henderson as assistant council members and they were all under the capable supervision of Miss Edick and Mr. Scott.

The second Friday they entertained the rest of the school and cat especially the Sophomores by wearing ridiculous costumes to classes. The fairer sex wore overalls, men's socks and shorts, straw hats and ties since. The young gentlemen of the class wore women's dresses and hats and silk hose, with tiny buttons for buttons. In the evening, the Sophomores entertained them with an informal party with plenty of fun and games. Some poor went up with only a few burlap bags and one or two mishaps on their part.

During the winter term they received the year's fractions. Mr. Freeman in a similar way and guided them up the stairway of knowledge.

They now turned to the last term in the affairs. They were: President, Maxine Dyball, Vice-president, Phyllis Fox; Secretary and Treasurer, Bill Wistner; and Student Council members, Bill Shockley and Margaret Bedford.

In their third and last year so far they had a number of undertakings, all of which were of great success. First, they worked hard selling candy, pop, hot dogs, and at fairs to raise money for the J-Hop. Second, as Juniors, they put on the Gulliver White. The play was designed to represent a haunted graveyard, theatre, in the U.S.A. At the close of the spectator they produced a stage success, "The Great Train," under the direction of Mrs. Davis and Mr. Fox. They ended the fine year by entertainig the departing Seniors at the J-Hop. The gym was a lovely re-creation of a colonial veranda and terrace.

With their heads full of running over with a sense, they began the last day of the race for knowledge. Many serious problems faced them, but most of them were solved and forgotten without much trouble.

The final class parties and fun followed them through their last days of schools. A Senior play and a Senior assembly were put on, and they ended a student to a somewhat shorter course of study. The Annual was the most difficult task of all, but with many drama, criticism, and much laughter, it was written. After being put to a punishing test by the censors, Miss Edick and Mr. Scott, it was printed or rewritten to everyone's satisfaction.

So, with tears ofingle gladness and sadness, they depart from the old halls of Franklin High School; halls that have seen them happy or sad, successes or failures, but halls that are proud of them. Proud because they were not too good nor too bad, but just ordinary American boys and girls learning to be ordinary American men and women.

The class officers during the eleventh and twelfth years were as follows:

Eleventh Grade

President--Gerald Luce
Vice-Pres.--Maxine Dyball
Secretary--Jean Byers
Treasurer--Wendell Borden

Twelfth Grade

President--Viola Jones
Vice-Pres.--Maxine Dyball
Secretary--Margaret Bedford
Treasurer--Marion West

CLASS POEM

They asked me to write a little verse
'Bout the class of '42
So I thought about the whole four years
That we had just been through.

In memory I walked back down
A chill and silent hall,
And gazed on all the graduates
That hung upon the wall.

I glimpsed the vacant benches
And all the fastened doors
But strange it was--I missed the
Paper-sprinkled floors.

I sauntered to the lunch room
And smelled a sandwich-smell
When suddenly, to my surprise,
I heard the five-minute bell!

There wasn't a lull from that time on;
The hall was filled with noise
Of many lockers and many throats
Of Senior girls and boys.

Greetings were yelled along the hall;
Locker jams took place,
But there was a kind of friendly smile
Upon each Senior's face.

It's strange when we look back now
To days that are no more
To all the pleasant times and fun
That crowd in through the door--

The teachers and the studying,
The parties and the chat,
The friends we made, the things we did,
Study Hall, and all that.

They asked me to write a little verse
'Bout the class of '42';
I couldn't--so I give you this
And bid a kind ado.
